2. I am licenced in each of those states, and am also allowed to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, the Eastern District of Virginia, and all military courts.
3. The information on this site is primarily intended to promote my services and qualifications to you as a potential client. A secondary reason is for general public information and education.
4. The content may contain dated material and not reflect current legal developments, verdicts or settlements. The law changes: new statutes or regulations are published; court opinions may change, overrule, or modify a prior case or application of a statute or regulation.
5. The pages do not provide nor are intended to provide nor should be relied upon to be legal advice or legal opinions on any matters. How the facts of your case fit within the law is also a significant concern. Bottom-line, do not take action in your case solely based on something you have read on this website. Consult with an attorney experienced in military law about the specific facts of your case and application of the law to those facts.
6. Transmission of this information does not, and is not intended to, create an attorney-client relationship or to serve as attorney work product. Receipt does not constitute an attorney-client relationship between the author(s), or the Email or telephonic communications or responses do not constitute or establish an attorney-client relationship. A written fee agreement, signed by both the attorney and client and in the possession of the attorney is required to establish an attorney-client relationship.

We are not formally associated with any other law firm, attorney, or association, although we regularly consult attorneys from other firms, and may recommend that you contact a specific law firm. The information here is intended to be general in nature and is not attorney advice or work product. Most serious matters require review, research, and analysis to give you appropriate advice. Additionally, we form professional relationships using a writing that outlines the legal service, the cost of legal services, and may require an advance retainer. Absent such a written agreement, no attorney-client relationship has been formed by this, or any other communication between this firm and the recipient of this information.

8. We do not, unless otherwise stated, receive a benefit from any website, organization, business, or individual listed on this website or to which there is a link.
